A speech contest was approaching. As a foreign student I was afraid that I wouldn't be good enough to compete. But after several discussion with my host family, I decided to take up a discussions the challenge. I want to improve both my English and public speaking skills. wanted

The hardest part was overcoming my fear of speak in front of people. At first, I would just speaking forget anything because I was so nervously. But gradually, I became less fearful when I looked everything nervous for the audience. After two months of daily training, the speech contest began. Surprisingly, I at started winning ~~for~~ awards! As the season progressed, I felt much confident and enjoyed speaking more(或在 much 后加 more) in front of people.

第二节：书面表达（共 1 题，满分 15 分）

Xiaoming, my next-door neighbor, is always occupied with extra-curricular activities on Sundays. Take last Sunday, for example. In the morning he attended an English class and a so-called Olympic Math training class at the local Children's Palace. In fact, Xiaoming doesn't like math. Shortly after a quick lunch, he was rushed in his father's car to a private tutor to practice (playing) the piano for an hour. Later, he was again taken to another tutor to learn painting for another hour. At the end of the day, Xiaoming was tired both physically and mentally.

What a poor boy! Children like Xiaoming should be allowed to do what they are really interested in rather than what their parents think is important. Give them more free time and choice and they'll be happier and healthier.
